

General Education Icon Set

By Taylor Wick

Side Notes

- Most of the colors chosen are not part of the UOP color palette because secondary colors can only be used when primary colors are present, which would limit my design
- More rounded, bubbly shapes are used to make the process less intimidating
- All of the icons are to scale

Feedback is appreciated!

Overview

Core

Breadth

Diversity

CORE Seminars

The Pacific General Education CORE courses introduce and develop transferable skills in critical thinking, problem solving, and oral and written communication that are crucial for personal, academic, and professional success.

CORE 001: Problem Solving and Oral Communication

CORE 002: Writing and Critical Thinking

The brain is the core of our being, which allows us to learn

Artistic creation is an endless cycle, inclusive of all art forms

Artistic Process & Creation

Stylized globe representing people around the world

Civic & Global Responsibility

Typing symbol which can be interpreted universally, it can be anything

Language & Narratives

Focus on quantity and measurement

Quantitative Reasoning

Beakers are often used to test your hypothesis or inquiry

Scientific Inquiry

Social usually means to travel to a location, and compasses help point you in the right direction

Social Inquiry

Lines in the globe represent different ideas and cultures traveling

World Perspectives & Ethics

Diversity & Inclusion Requirement

Students also choose at least one Diversity & Inclusion course.

Diversity & Inclusion courses may appear in any of the above categories, or in classes that count towards major or minor requirements. Diversity & Inclusion courses will help students to articulate, in both written and oral forms, how notions of difference work within frameworks of social hierarchy. (Difference may be defined by such notions as age, class, citizenship, disability, ethnicity, gender identity, language, nationality, race, religion, sexual orientation, and/or socioeconomic status.) For more information, click here.

Both sides of this symbol are diverse, but we all share the commonality of being a student at UOP, which is why I chose the primary colors

Thank you for your time!